My parents, John and I in Hengelo

Roosje spends her early years in the German town of Kleef. Her father is one of the managers in a factory. When she is 7 years old she visits a school but she is miserable there. She often thinks of what the girl from next door told her: "I am not allowed to play with you; you are a Jew; my mummy says". Or they call after her: "Jöd, Jöd, stinkt in de böit!". Sometimes they even throw stones at her.
