Roosje and her mother are ordered to travel to Westerbork in 1942. Westerbork is the Dutch concentration camp where all Dutch Jews are interned. From there they are transported to eastern Europe. It is unknown what happens to them there, but it spells trouble. That is why Roosje and her mother decide to go into hiding. A friend gives them an address in Naarden. The guesthouse there is run by a member of the NSB and his German wife. Roosje thinks that that is enough reason for the Germans not to look for her there. With fake identity cards and a fabricated story that they are running from the police who want to hold them hostage like her father, the NSB member allows them into the guesthouse and they rent two rooms.

WHAT DO YOU DO: DO YOU GIVE A TOTAL STRANGER, RUNNING FROM THE POLICE A PLACE IN YOUR HOUSE AND DOES HE HAVE TO PAY YOU?
